And to know I don't have to fly to Paris to get really good ones.This small book is packed with useful information on how to make macarons. I've made macarons in the past but my results were hit and miss. My first batch using this book came out perfectly domed with a nice foot. Crisp on the outside and slightly chewy in the middle. I made the Italian meringue version.The whipped ganache filling technique is brilliant. We made both the mint filling with fresh mint leaves and the salted caramel filling.The only negative was that I found it difficult to follow the in-text instructions. I prefer numbered steps so I can find my place more quickly when doing a process where timing is important. (Oops, I just noticed that there are numbered steps. I just hadn't paid attention to what was in the colored dots.)Lots of useful troubleshooting tips and explanations of what makes the process work... or not work. I just wish it wasn't raining today so I could make another batch. Maybe I'll make some more fillings in anticipation.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. SweetsBy CookieThis book Sweet Macarons is great.All the recipes are so easy to followand the cookies are so good my familyreally enjoyed them. A great buy.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Sweet Macarons: Delectable French confections for Every DayBy Donald C. BussI ordered this for my wife. She likes macarons and thought she would like to expand her culinary capabilities. Her first attempts have been very successful.

With macarons firmly in place as the latest baking craze, famed French foodie and macaron maker extraordinaire Jacqueline Mercorelli, known as blogger Mercotte, provides 25 no-fail French macaron recipes in Sweet Macarons, now available for the first time in English.

About the Author Jacqueline Mercorelli, known as Mercotte, lives in Savoy, France, near Chambéry. A self-taught French baker, Mercotte started her blog in May 2005. Since then her recipes have gotten rave reviews and her blog has become a must read for anyone wanting to make macarons at home. In June 2011, Novoceram named Mercotte as one of its top three passion leaders.
